

Contact | Facilitating Information Sharing Between Strangers Using Hyperlocal Community Wireless Networks

Playful Urban Interventions

Example: Yellow Chair Stories
Superflux

Inclusive Output

Example: TXTual Healing
Paul Notzold

HYBRID PUBLIC SPACES AS TRIANGULATORS ENABLING STRANGERS TO INTERACT WITH EACH OTHER

DIY Networking

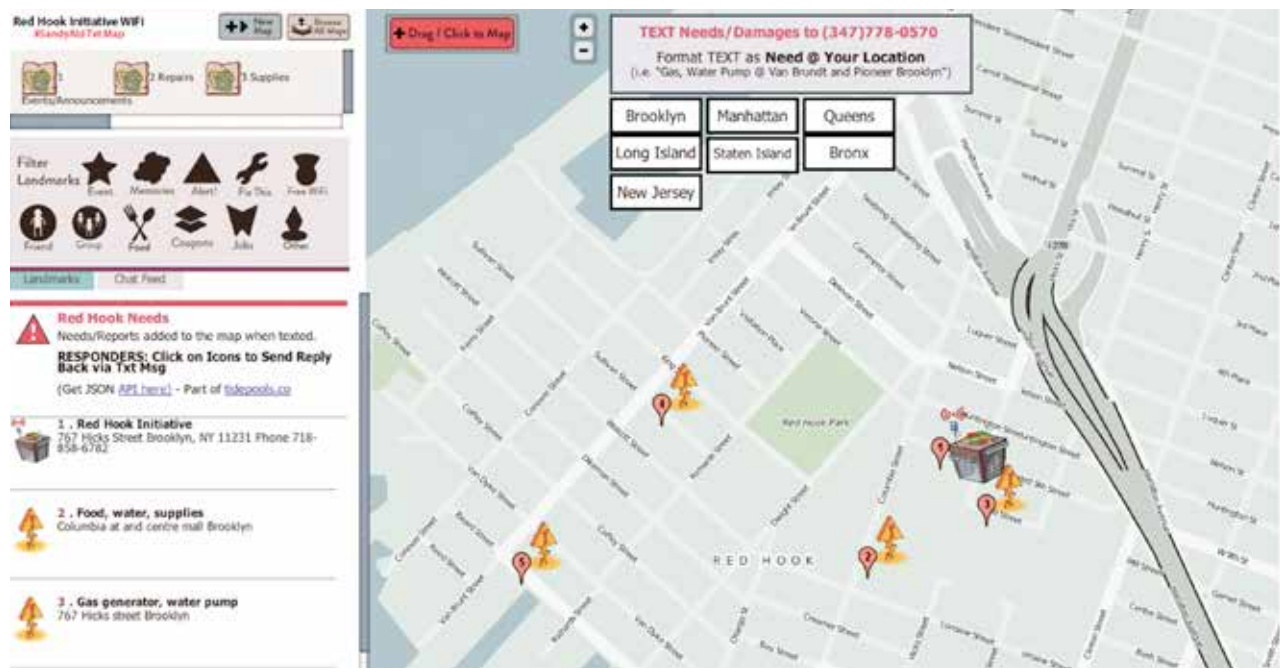

Example: Occupy Here
occupyhere.org

Inclusive Input

Example: Hybrid Letter Box
Design Research Lab | Berlin University of the Arts

Open Source Social Software

Example: Tide Pools
<http://tidepools.co>

A guy sits on a square and finds an open wifi called contact.

He logs in and finds himself relocated to a landing page automatically.

He finds a simple forum where people converse about the actual square.

He contributes a line and finds it projected onto the central sculpture.

Others submit input with text messages or through a photo booth.

Looking around he realizes that all the users are actually physically there.

He spends some good hours enjoying the conversations triggered by this.